Students will test vote-at-home rule

Independent legal action is the only recourse that McGill students have at this moment against chief electoral officer Nelson Castonguay's Interpretation of the Elections Act.

Eligible students desiring to vote will have to return to their home ridings, from Bonaville-Twillington to Esquimalt-Saanich.

The Canadian Union of Students, however, has obtained a legal opinion which suggests some students may be able to successfully contest this ruling. Copies of the opinion have been sent to member universities, including McGill.

Students' Council here has made no plans to assist the unknown number of affected students.

According to Castonguay, students must have been registered with their universities before September 8 to vote in the university riding. Door-to-door enumerators have been instructed not to include students on the electoral lists.

Complaints will be handled by the riding's revising officers from October 21-23. Further appeals will be considered by substitute revising officers appointed by the Quebec Supreme Court, whose decisions can again be appealed directly to a judge.

The legal opinion being distributed by CUS indicates that a segment of the effectively disenfranchised students may be able to make successful appeals. However, they must:

have attended McGill in the previous year,

not have lived with their parents last summer,

intend to continue living separated from their families, and must consider their residence at the university as a home.

Canada Council honours Scott with Molson Foundation grant

Professor Frank R. Scott, former Dean of the Faculty of Law, has been awarded one of this year's two Molson Prizes by the Canada Council.

The $15,000 awards seek to recognize outstanding achievements in the arts, humanities, and social sciences. The second recipient this year is theatre director Jean Gascon, also from Montreal.

Professor Scott has made important contributions in the widely separated fields of poetry and constitutional law. He has also written on social problems and Canadian foreign policy.

He has remained a member of the Law Faculty, after resigning last year as Dean to work on the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism.

His academic career includes study at Bishop's, Oxford, and McGill. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada, and has been a Rhodes Scholar and a Guggenheim Fellow.

He was a member of the National Council of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs from 1935 to 1950, and national chairman of the C.C.F. party from 1942 to 1950.

The Molson Prizes were created two years ago from a $600,000 gift to the Canada Council by the Molson Foundation to encourage service to the Canadian cultural heritage and contributions to good relations between Canada's two language groups.

Additional grants

In addition to the Molson Prize, Canada Council has awarded a short-term grant to assist eight workers involved in research for the Burney Project at McGill University. The Burney Project entails the collecting, editing and publishing of the diary and correspondence of Fanny Burney, the eighteenth century English diarist. The project is under the direction of Dr. Joyce Hemlow, Professor of English Literature at McGill.

Canada Council meted out, as well, a number of short term research grants to staff members of McGill. Among those who were recipients of the grants: Geraint N.D. Evans, Assistant Professor of History; Raymond Klibansky, Professor and Chairman, Department of Philosophy; Ralph S. Walker, Professor and Chairman of the Department of English; H. H. Walsh, Professor of Church History; John E.C. Brierley, Assistant Professor of Law; and Peter Collins, Professor of Architecture.

A total of 191 candidates competed for these awards as opposed to last year's 206 applicants.

Moyse Hall renovated; to see active fall season

A summer face-lifting of Moyse Hall has given lecturers and actors who use it reason to be grateful.

The improvements, the first since the Hall's construction in 1927, centre around the installation of new foam rubber padded chairs.

The "mouse" brown backdrop curtain which has been part of the Hall since its opening (the date 1927 is stamped on it) has been removed.

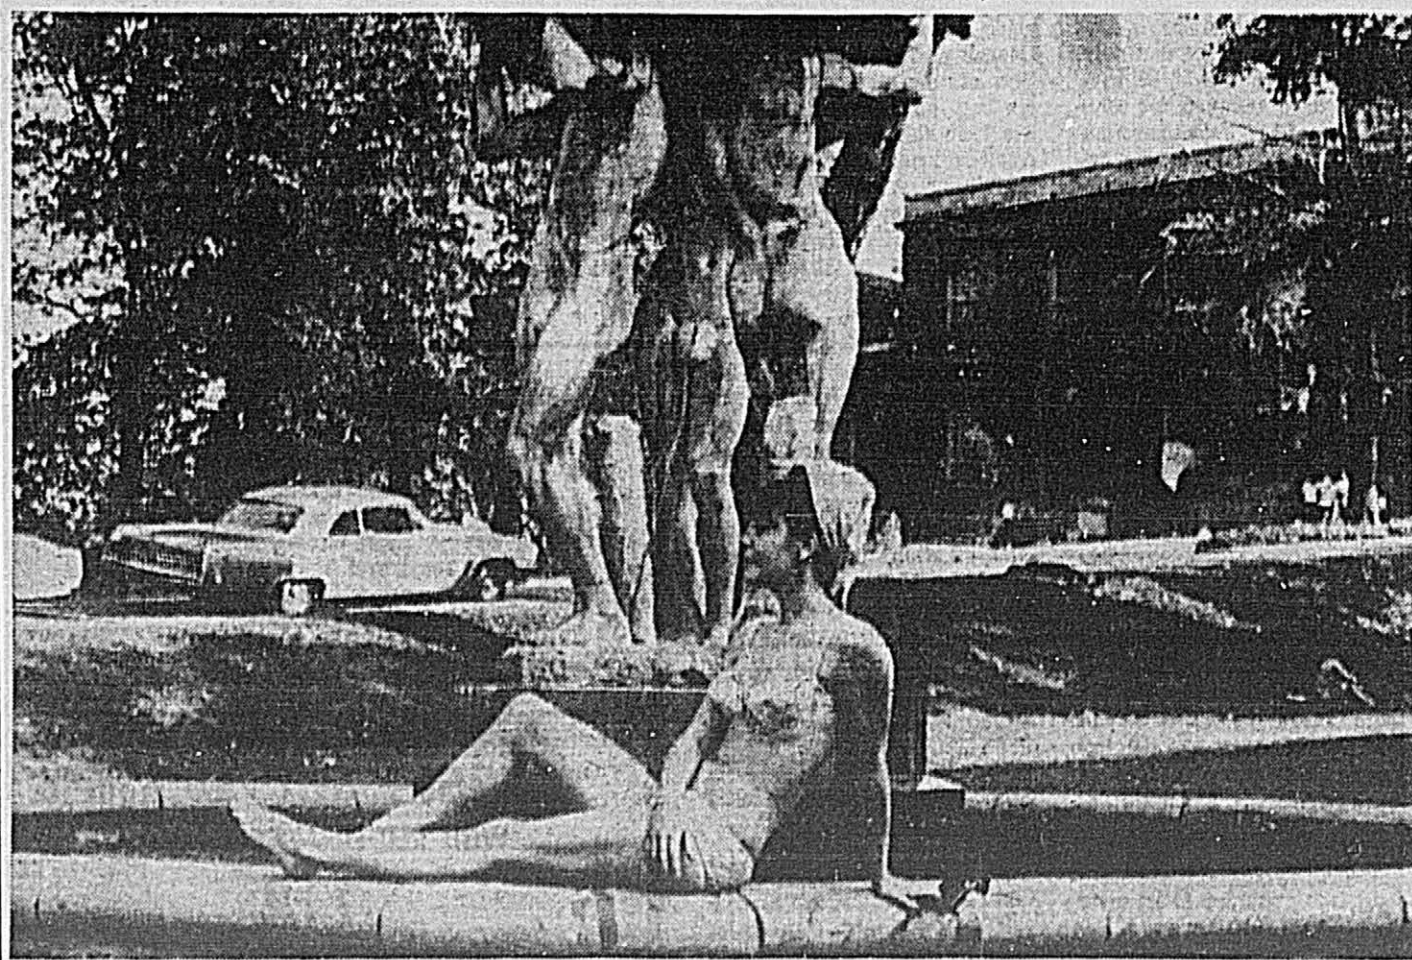

Other changes include carpeting on the aisles, a coat of white paint on the supporting columns, and double doors in the rear.

Adviser Frank Faragoh of English Department theatrical productions noted that a new angle of grade in the two aisles would greatly improve the visual potential of the Hall. He hoped it

Une province comme les autres

A crudely-painted sign with the words "Québec Libre" crossed out and followed by the hopeful "not if we can help it" has been the first introduction freshmen have had to the political thinking of McGill's Progressive Conservative Club. Even in terms of conservatism, it would be a pity if this particular sentiment were allowed to stand as a reflection of Canadian conservative political sentiment.

Over the past few years McGill Conservatives have unfortunately been subjected to a takeover of their club by those who in no way represent Canadian conservatism; the phenomenon of Goldwaterism, a very un-Canadian kind of thinking has been rampant on the McGill Right for some time past. The idea of a Québec Libre, striding over the mangled bodies of Goldwaterites may very well be an attractive one to many people. It should not, nevertheless, be allowed to confuse the real issue that lies behind the national issue in Canada. A recent book "Lament for a Nation" by a traditional Canadian Conservative opens up the discussion in a way which has not been seen for some time.

For too long, the Left in Canada has accepted the two-nation theory in a manner so uncritical as to suggest that the whole job of progressive thinking is to write the party platforms of the Government. Having persuaded all the various ethnic groups that, in fact, the concept of two founding races is not at all reactionary, the Left now finds itself saddled with a concept of Canada which is totally out of touch with Canadian reality.

The gimmick of bi-culturalism dreamed up by the backroom boys of the Liberal administration has been seized on by the Left and propagated as Gospel. Bewildered farmers in the Kootenays have been talked at for endless hours about the French problem when all they have been worried about is whether the Doukhobors will march again this year. The Prairies have been inundated with bilingualism when they are desperately concerned with the fact that the kids no longer know how to speak Ukrainian. And all of this has been perpetuated in the name of national unity.

All of which has a direct bearing on Canadian conservatism; the Canada visualized by Conservatives is infinitely more attractive than the one postulated by the Liberal Party, a group which in effect represents the interests of American big business in Canada. Once one has removed Yankee mavericks such as Harkness and Léon Balcer, one finds an older, richer and more truly nationalist ethic in the ranks of the Conservative Party. The reason for this is quite simple: conservatism as a political concept springs from the same roots as socialism. It begins from the idea of a collective morality, totally opposed to the rampant individualism of official Liberalism. The reason why someone like Harold MacMillan fell from power is because, on a personal level, he was shocked to find that one of his colleagues did not share his own concept of personal and social morality; the reason why conservatism in Canada is dismayed by recent trends has to do with the fact that many elements in the Government have seen fit to play fast and loose with the mandate given to them by thousands of ordinary people whose only demand was peace and a strong stand against social injustice everywhere.

Hence the silliness of the McGill Conservative club when it chooses to fight its battles over the question of separatism. The real issue has little to do with whether Quebec separates or not. India, Nigeria and numerous other ex-colonial countries have achieved political independence over the last twenty years. The only result has been that the rate of foreign domination has increased two-fold. Thus can Time Magazine run pictures of six new Nigerian millionaires; thus can Washington continue to call the shots in New Delhi.

As far as Quebec is concerned, if it separates it will be because the State Department has said it will not interfere with such a process. And the price for American agreement will be the continuation of a free trade area running from east to west in order to ensure the flow of Venezuelan oil from the Montreal refineries. Separatism under these conditions is perfectly acceptable to the Americans, as it is to the Liberal Party in Canada. M. Lesage is perfectly prepared to preside over the dissolution of the present Canadian confederation provided the new Quebec is the kind of Quebec that is acceptable to the men who pull the strings. The real problem about separatism is never mentioned: what the State Department, the Canadian Liberal Party and their various supporters are worried about is the possibility of another Cuba a few hundred miles from New York.

And More On Taste

Dear Sir:

My letter is in response to a complaint to the Daily registered by Miss Thompson and Messrs Kaufmann and Flye in a letter on Wednesday. With reference to Dr. Robertson, it has become a part of journalistic tradition to refer to adult males in our society by their last names. With reference to their criticism of a Daily caption below a picture of Messrs Notman and Taylor, it might be worth noting that critical captions have become an integral part of Time and other publications which probably constitute staple reading for the three authors. There is no real question of "taste", "proper respect", or whether the Administration is "working to the best of its ability". The conflict is over fundamental beliefs.

Two clear and salient points have arisen from discussion with the Administration:

1. Dr. Robertson has made it clear that the Administration feels that students should pay fees. Implicit in this sentiment is the belief that only the wealthy should be permitted to compete for education. The Administration is in fact unequivocally rejecting the ethos of an egalitarian and democratic society for social scientists have provided ample evidence of massive discrimination in the field of higher education.

2. The Administration has also made it clear that it has no system of financing the university, that it projects budgets yearly, and that it has no short-range or long-range financial plans.

These points lead to some important conclusions. The first conclusion, and a very direct one to make, is that the more "able", skillful, or competent the Administration may be, the more the Administration will in fact be working against the public good for it will be acting on anti-egalitarian beliefs. In fact the more skillful the Administration becomes and the more it is permitted to act upon its apparent beliefs, the fewer chances there will be for those who are academically prepared to attend university in the future.

A second conclusion to be made concerns the methods of financing. The financial position of the university is incredibly poor. One illustration has been the inability to plan. Another has been the state of the Library. A 1961 Report comparing a sample of 21 North American university libraries ranks McGill in the bottom quarter by almost every consideration. McGill was listed as possessing 850 thousand volumes compared to 1.9 million for the U of T. In a sample which ranged from Harvard and Princeton to Florida and Virginia, McGill ranked worst in expenditures per student. Another illustration of McGill's state of affairs is the fact that the Alma Mater Fund, during its 17 years of existence has collected but $3.5 million, less than 45% of this year's contribution from the province. The Endowment Fund in turn accounts for less than 10% of the contribution from the provincial government alone.

We must develop a policy that will raise the standards of education at this university to at least a median level and that will permit all those who are academically qualified to attend. We have had a history of degrades in which our particular version of "private" education has failed. What we are calling for is a publicly supported system of high quality education. This is where the conflict lies and this is what a benevolent but self-perpetuating elite which has run McGill affairs is attempting to resist.

M. J. Keating

Ed. note: Editorial notes are a bore; they are also unfair to correspondents. Hence our decision not to reply to the specific points raised by the correspondents in yesterday's issue. Our aim was to clear up the question of procedure in writing letters to the paper. The other, more serious points raised, are open to public discussion.

Red Feather Blitz to hit campus soon

Red Feather Blitz chairman Brian Ferguson yesterday announced plans for the joint McGill-Sir George Williams campaign to be held September 30.

Students will gather on the lower campus where buses will take them to their designated areas, in Point St. Charles, Verdun, Ahuntsic, Villeray, and Outremont.

Upon returning, all canvassers will be invited to a party which will be held in the Union. Refreshments will be provided, plus entertainment by Dean Morgan and his Band.

Although the campaign is run by Fraternities and Sororities, everyone is urged to attend, especially freshmen.

Heat wave reaps havoc; boiler mishap at Union

A deluge of boiling water inundated the fourth floor of the Union on Tuesday. The boiler in the penthouse sent a flood of water first down the stairs, and then through the ceiling.

Students were the first to discover the incident. Eventually the noise attracted porter Bill Burnett, who quickly contacted the Buildings and Grounds Department. In a commendably short time the manager arrived.

It turned out that the warm weather had expanded the pipes of the carry-off system. The boiling water had overflowed into the carry-off system, leaked rapidly onto the floor, through an open door, and down the stairwell.

Mysterious rumours circulated about campus carried hints of a daring rescue of a Union cleaning lady held captive by the deluge. The would-be rescuer—a Union porter, later denied that the rumour had any factual basis.

IRC slates dance

The newly-formed Inter-Residence Council will launch this year's social programme with a "Round One" dance at Bishop Mountain Hall, Friday at 8:30 pm.

The Council plans to offer similar dances every weekend throughout the term.

The IRC, consisting of two representatives from each of the four men's residences and from Royal Victoria College, was formed late last year to unite that ten percent of the student population living in residence, primarily through social and athletic programmes.

"Round One" boasts entertainment by the Hounds as well as free admission to all women and to all students in residence. Refreshments will be served.

Moyse Hall...

would have an effect on acoustics as well.

Professor Farago commented on what he considered the extremely poor condition of the stage floor. However, he doubted that anything could be done before his November 18 production "The Devil's Disciple" by Shaw.

A new glassed-in control booth and lights with a dimmer control will aid the Department plays, but Farago needs additional staff for these facilities, as well as workers on costumes (for information call 844-6311).

In spite of the changes the focal point of Moyse Hall remains its $75,000 gilt ceiling.

Tandy Cronyn will appear in the production of "The Devil's Disciple" to be held in the recently renovated Moyse Hall this November.

No social life for Redmen

"Education first, football second" — Mooney

by JOHN SKINNER

When the football Redmen take to the field for their first game in Toronto's Varsity Stadium Oct. 2, fans will notice a number of new faces under the Red and White helmets. While most of the experts around the league aren't giving McGill much of a chance, they quite likely overlook a young, no-nonsense head coach named Tom Mooney.

Mooney is not a young hotshot riding on a wave of big words and small actions. He is a winner of considerable experience, having been successful with almost every team he has guided.

Example: In four years with the University of Guelph he finished second twice and won two championships. During the same period he served as playing coach with the Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen of the Ontario Rugby Football Union and, in three years, won three championships.

During his playing days at Miami of Ohio University, his team under Ara Parseghian ran up a record of 37 wins, one tie, and two losses in four years.

The young coach is high on dedication, too. Some 36 Redmen hopefuls discovered this early in the season when Mooney showed he wanted the players to take their football seriously. He told them quite frankly that if they were going to play on his team they would have to sacrifice their social life for the season. And he intends to enforce this rule.

This of course, doesn't mean that football will be the only thing the players will have to look forward to.

"It'll be education first, football second and no social life", says Mooney. "That will have to be the sacrifice. Let's face it—this is amateur football and the right attitude is all-important".

The next tussle

Redmen take on St. Mary's in Halifax Friday and, after a week of hard training, should give the Maritimers a good battle. But a stronger offence than the one displayed against the University of Ottawa Gee Gees will be necessary if McGill is to down St. Mary's. At any rate, however, Redmen will be an improved team.
